—In the Cedar Hill school house last evening the members of the Presbyterian church held a very pleasant social. The musical programme was all that could be desired.

—C. E. C. Brown, a resident of New Westminster for ten years, died on Tuesday night, aged 54. He was prominent in temperance circles and well known throughout the interior, where for years he practiced his profession as a dentist.

—The New Westminsterites, with an enterprise that might be imitated here, are moving in the matter of their annual exhibition. The floods, which will undoubtedly militate against the success of the show this year, have not dampened the ardor of the directors, who are going to excel all previous efforts.

—How these doctors wax fat! The government asked Vancouver council to pay $200 for the vaccination of incoming passengers on the C. P. R. trains for ten days between August 10 and 20, 1892. The council demurred and will look up the law. The charge is not excessive, judged by others made about that time.

—The funeral of the late Mrs. John Davie took place this morning from the family residence, Fairholme, on Belcher street near Government. The funeral procession left the house at 9.20 o'clock and proceeded to Christ Church cathedral, where services for the dead were conducted. Canon Beanlands officiated, assisted by Canon Paddon. The funeral was very largely attended and there were many beautiful floral offerings. The pall bearers were Hon. J. H. Turner, Hon. C. E. Pooley, Dr. James Helmcken, H. D. Helmcken, Dr. E. B. C. Hanington, D. M. Eberts, Dr. Hasell and A. C. Flumerfelt.

THE TROUBLE NOT ENDED.

The Belligerent Strikers Although Not Working Are Not Altogether Idle.

Traighen Assaulted, Bridges Burned and Blown Up, and Convicts Banqueted.

Hammond, July 18.—Strikers at Monon depot last evening assaulted the train men. The militia dispersed the crowd.

McKeesport, Pa., July 18.—The National Tube Works strike has been declared off. The men return to work to-morrow.

Butte, Mont., July 18.—The Union and Northern Pacific companies say their roads will remove trains as soon as sufficient regulars arrive. Several bridges between this city and Lila were burned yesterday. One was blown up with dynamite.

Brazil, Ind., July 18.—Four strikers convicted of complicity in the murder of the Vandalia engineer, who were about to be taken to the state's prison, were banquetted last night in the jail yards here by friends and relatives with the sheriff's permission. The men have been sentenced to two years each.

Vallejo, Cala., July 18.—A supply of provisions, enough to last the naval force for 30 days, has been sent to Oakland, and the sailors and marines now at Oakland are to be kept there for an indefinite time, orders to that effect having been sent from Washington.

Oakland, Cala., July 18.—The situation is still unchanged. If there was any gain it has been in favor of the railroad. They calculate on send'ng out six freight trains and receiving freight. Two freights is the most sent out any day since the beginning of the strike. The system adopted by strikers of terrorizing men who were disposed to return to work during the past few days, operated as the strikers represented. Several good men were frightened away, bothering the company considerably. The action taken at the citizens' meeting, it is thought, will reassure the men who want to work if they will be protected. State troops arrived this morning. All passenger trains are being run practically on schedule time.

Dunsmuir, Cal., July 18.—A train of soldiers from Sacramento arrived here guns cocked and bayonets fixed. Some ladies shouted three cheers for the A. R. U. Everything was quiet and every one showed the utmost respect for Uncle Sam's men. They quickly cleared the streets.

Chicago, July 18.—Debs, Howard, Kelcisher and Rogers passed a pleasant night in jail and slept well. This morning they ate hearty breakfast. Debs devoted a greater part of the morning to answering private correspondence. He refused to be interviewed. There can be no meeting of the executive board of the strikers while its principal members are in jail. The imprisoned leaders have not yet availed themselves of the permission given by Judge Seaman, to leave the jail in charge of a bailiff. This morning Debs was visited by scores of persons, among them his brother, wife and sister. Several offers of bail have been politely refused.

Chicago, July 18.—The strike headquarters were deserted to-day. Director Burns is now in full charge of the affairs of the union in Chicago. Director Roy Goodwin, who left for St. Paul a few days ago to tie up the Great Northern and Northern Pacific, it is said, is expected to return to Chicago to-day.

A passenger coach was thrown from the track in the yards to-day by a green switchman. The presence of the Fifth regiment at the wreck while it was being cleared gave rise to the rumor that rioting had been renewed.

The mayor denied to-day that he had been taking steps to secure the removal of the federal troops. He said none of the militia would be relieved from duty to-day.

Fort Scott, July 18.—The Bourbon County Farmers' Alliance have decided to boycott the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Memphis road for bringing marshals into the city.

Guthrie, July 18.—Guards were overpowered and another Rock Island bridge was burned south of Enid last night. Soldiers were fired on at Round Pond. The situation is growing worse.

Logan, July 18.—The Hocking Valley strike has been declared off.

Omaha, Neb., July 18.—Four companies of regulars left Fort Omaha today bound for Butte for the purpose of raising the strikers' blockade on the U.P.

Los Angeles, Cala., July 18.—John Howarth and Martin Kelly, tried for contempt of Judge Ross' injunction order on the A. R. U., were sentenced this morning to eight months each in the county jail. This is the heaviest sentence any of the strikers have been sentenced by Judge Ross.

Sacramento, July 18.—At no time since the arrival of troops to assist the Southern Pacific in the movements of trains have the strikers had such a decided advantage as they hold to-day. Despite the announcement of officials that trains would run on schedule time, the fact remains that but two trains had left the depot up to noon to-day. Switch engines are standing in the yard but are of no avail as there are no switchmen. General J. L. Hart, attorney for the local A. R. U., executed a brilliant coupe this morning when he had subpoenas issued for the switchmen in the yard, calling upon them to go to Woodland as witnesses in the case of Knox and Worden. The preliminary examination comes up in the superior court at this place this morning and the men were compelled to leave their posts for that place. Thus the company is left without switchmen for an indefinite period.

The railway officials and military authorities were thrown into a fever of excitement this afternoon by the discovery that the track had been tampered with at a point midway between Yolo bridge and trestle two, the scene of the wreck a week ago to-day. Track walkers discovered that an attempt had been made to knock a fishplate from its position. Instead of removing the plate by removing the nuts and drawing the bolts the appearance indicates that a heavy sledge was employed and by repeated blows at the end of the plate the bolts were almost cut in two. A train to San Francisco passed over it safely a few minutes before.

NEARING PROROGATION.

The Dominion Parliament Bringing its Work to a Close.

Ottawa, July 18.—The house occupied considerable time yesterday afternoon discussing the suspension of Colonel Powell and the charges made against Quebec judges by Mr. Tarte. Several members attacked General Herbert and charged him with demoralizing the force. Minister Patterson refused to discuss Herbert's conduct, on the ground that he had received no report from him. Sir John Thompson advised the house to pay no attention to the charges against the judges, but Mr. McCarthy thought steps should be taken to prevent a repetition of such attacks on the bench by a member.

It is expected that the house will be prorogued on Saturday.

T. P. Gorman, editor of the Free Press, is dead.

Sir John Thompson moved to-day that the house meet daily hereafter at 11 o'clock. This includes Saturday.

Mr. Foster stated that the translation of the liquor commission's report was suspended because the parliamentary grant was expended. (Laughter.)

The house will hold two sessions tomorrow, meeting at 11 o'clock in the forenoon.

SECTARIAN SCHOOLS.

Senators Protest Against Appropriations for Them.

Washington, July 18.—The senate took up the Indian appropriations bill to-day. Quay presented a petition from the citizens of Pennsylvania against appropriations for Indian education at sectarian schools and moved that the consideration of the bill be postponed so that the patriotic orders of the country could be heard. This was rejected. Considerable discussion followed on the appropriation of a million dollars for Indian day and industrial schools. Several senators protested against the appropriations for the education of Indians at Catholic schools.

Lyons, July 18.—The Italian residents have made claims against the government for two million francs for damage done during the anti-Italian rioting resulting from the assassination of the late President Carnot.

AMERICAN NEWS.

Spokane's Defaulting Banker Escapes Into Mexico.

San Francisco, July 18.—Horace L. Cutter, ex-president of the Spokane Savings Bank and the defaulting cashier of the First National Bank of Spokane, who is wanted at Spokane for embezzlement, escaped into Mexico on the night of the 30th of June, and thus evaded the officers who were in pursuit.

New York, July 18.—The bark Emma T. Crowell, which left yesterday for Shanghai, was discovered to be on fire last evening, off Fire Island. She was burned to the water's edge. The captain, his wife and the crew escaped in a small boat and were picked up and brought here.

New York, July 18.—Lillian Russell and Chauncey Depew were passengers for Europe on the Majestic. Lillian said despite the injunction served on her yesterday she will sing in London. With regard to the strike Depew said it had done no good further than to show the power of the government.

Memphis, Tenn., July 18.—Quite a discussion occurred in the house to-day between several members over a desire on the part of one of them to correct a record, which showed him to be abstaining from voting when as a matter of fact he did vote. Among those who took part were Reed and Speaker Crisp. The former lauded the system of counting the quorum in vogue when he was speaker. Crisp defended the present system. The senate bill to regulate the army enlistment was then passed.

St. Louis, Mo., July 18.—A slight shock of earthquake was felt here to-day.

Washington, D. C., July 18.—The senate has agreed to the conference report on the naval appropriations bill.

Chicago, July 18.—The soldiers killed in the powder explosion on Monday were taken to Fort Sheridan to-day and interred with simple honors.

AGREE TO DISAGREE.

Tariff Conferees Decide to Disagree With the Senate Amendments.

Gresham's Queer Action Respecting Trouble Between China and Japan.

Washington, July 18.—The Democratic members of the tariff conference committee met again this morning, but adjourned at noon with the understanding that a full meeting of the committee was to be held at 2 p.m., when there would be a general disagreement with the senate amendment. The disagreement is to be reported to the house to-morrow.

When it was found that the conferees could not agree on the tariff Senator Jones consulted the president. He said he represented that all movements looking to concessions by the senate to the house conferees had been blocked by Gorman.

The government several days ago directed the American representatives in China and Japan to express to the governments of those countries the hope of the United States that an amicable adjustment of the Corean controversy would be reached. This was intended as an intimation that the United States would, if asked, act as an intermediary.

The cruiser Baltimore has reached Chemul, Corea.

Wilson informed Senator Jones this afternoon that the house would instruct his conferees to insist on the house tariff bill and the conferees would be sent back two hours after the report on the bill had been made to-morrow. It is believed the bill will be in conference again by Saturday. It is said further that the conferees have agreed on many items.

GRESHAM SIDES WITH CHINA.

Cables to Japan Dissatisfaction With Its Corean Policy.

New York, July 18.—The Sun's Washington correspondent telegraphs that he has learned that the Chinese minister, who has been in frequent communication of late with the secretary of state regarding the strained relations existing between Japan and Corea, has finally induced the secretary to send an official cable dispatch to the Japanese government expressing the dissatisfaction of the United States with the policy which Japan has been following with regard to Corea, and closing with these important words: "The United States views with regret the levying of unjust war by Japan upon a weak and defenceless nation like Corea."

The Japanese government made no reply. At the Japanese legation the officials profess to know nothing whatever about the belligerent message and express grave doubt as to the accuracy of the story. They declare their confidence in and their esteem for the secretary of state, and say that he has always treated them with the greatest courtesy and attention. If any such communication has been sent to their government they think it must have been transmitted through Mr. Dunn, the United States minister to Tokio. The correspondent adds: "There is no doubt about the existence of the cable dispatch. Secretary Gresham has shown a copy of it to Sir Julian Pauncefote, British ambassador, the Chinese and Corean legations have copies of it, and the fact of its existence is known to several members of the senate and the house committee on foreign relations. The dispatch practically places the United States on the side of China in her dispute with Japan and Russia and has probably destroyed with a single stroke of the pen all the good results that have been gained by half a century of diplomacy and friendly relations with Japan."

GOVERNMENT'S PROGRAMME.

Welsh Disestablishment Goes Over Until Next Session.

London, July 18.—In the house to-day Harcourt announced the government's programme for the remainder of the session. He said the Welsh church disestablishment and local veto bills would have to go over until next session, but he thought the evicted tenants' bill, equalization of London rates bill and the miners' eight hours bill could be passed this session.

London, July 18.—In reply to a message of congratulation from the Liberal association Mr. Gladstone has written a letter reiterating emphatically that after the dissolution of the present parliament he will not return to the house of commons from any constituency. As he has already refused an elevation to the house of lords the announcement means the permanent retirement of the Grand Old Man from political life.

Scores of Radical associations throughout the country have adopted resolutions approving the action of Kier Hardie, the Radical Labor member of parliament, in opposing a resolution congratulating the Queen on the birth of a son to the Duke and Duchess of York, and assuring him that his action represents the sentiments of hundreds of thousands of Radicals throughout the country.

The supreme court of Denmark, which is the highest judicial tribunal, has confirmed the sentence of death passed upon the man named Max Moclerr for murder committed under extraordinary circumstances. For over five years wearing the garb and carrying the name of a woman he had occupied the position of matron at an orphan asylum. He was convicted of having murdered one of the pupils toward whom he had previously been guilty of improper conduct.

Socialists Cause an Uproar.

Paris, July 18.—The chamber of deputies was thrown into an uproar again to-day by the protests of socialists during the discussion of the anti-anarchist bill.

Dynamite in Brussells.

MISCELLANY.

Railway employes in England are now instructed in first aid to the injured under the auspices of the St. John's Ambulance Association.

Who was that young man who stayed here until twelve o'clock last night? asked Susie's father at the breakfast table. It was William, my sweetheart, replied Susie. William, humph! It would be better to call him Bill. I am sure he would not object to it, replied Susie. Yes, said the old gentleman, I think in future I will call him Bill—Gas Bill!

Clipperton Island, in the South Pacific ocean, is a big rock, honeycombed with strange shapes, covered with guano and blazing like a diamond when seen from afar. The wooden houses have to be covered with tin to protect them from the voracious crabs which abound and eat through the wood. The surrounding water is full of sharks. The sharks are very vicious and seem to be without fear, as they are in great numbers. When a boat is being rowed ashore the man-eaters jump out of the water and snap at a man. A recent visitor to the island says that while his ship, the Volant, was lying at Clipperton the strangest kind of a fish I ever saw came astern of her. In shape it was something like a seingray, with a long, ugly looking tail. It spread big wings that must have been at least twenty feet wide from tip to tip. The superintendent said it was a rayfish, and others called it a sunfish. It stuck its head up, then spread out its wings and skimmed over the water. Strange things do be and happen in foreign latitudes, and many queer things are seen, when you have no gun.

THE STRIKE SITUATION.

Northern Pacific Engineers Return to Work—Proposition to Southern Pacific.

A Military Captain Arrested at Dunsmuir for Ordering a Charge.

Sacramento, July 18.—Information has come to military headquarters to the effect that threats have been made, presumably, among the friends of Worden against the life of young Sherburn, who drove Worden, Hatch and others over to the trestle where the train was wrecked last Wednesday. Sherburn is at present kept at military headquarters under a heavy guard.

The Portland express, which was tied up at Dunsmuir on the second day of the strike, left here with an escort of soldiers and passed through to San Francisco this morning.

It is reported that a captain of a Stockton military company is under arrest at Dunsmuir. The town constable arrested him and locked him up for ordering his company to charge the crowd. A loaded cannon, which had been in the possession of the strikers, was captured by the soldiers this morning, being found in a box car.

Benicia, Cal., July 18.—As a passenger train from San Francisco for Oakland was at Port Costa yesterday morning at 9.40, it ran into a switch engine which had been left on the main track by scab switchmen crew. Both engines were demolished. The engineers and firemen escaped by jumping. The track is covered with wreckage.

San Francisco, July 18.—The local branch of the A. R. U. announced today that orders have been received from Debs to declare the strike off on the Southern Pacific if the company would agree to take back all members of the union without prejudice.

Oakland, Cal., July 18.—The A. R. U., through J. Watson, prominent in the organization, has succeeded in procuring from Judge Ellsworth, a writ of habeas corpus. This writ commands Lieut.-Col. Geary to produce in court to-morrow morning the person of E. J. Jost, who was arrested yesterday within the picket lines as a spy. The issuance has created a sensation in legal circles, because of the fact that martial law is supposed to exist in West Oakland. Such an interference by civil authorities in military matters is not clearly understood. The result may prove that martial law has not been declared in West Oakland.

Tacoma, July 17.—Being assured of guards and all possible protection, nearly all the Northern Pacific engineers returned to work in a body today, and the American Railway Union men say they will now fight the railroad company and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and if they succeed the American Railway Union firemen will not work with them. Last night the American Railway Union men believed they had the stampede side-tracked, but it is still on the main track, although the American Railway Union men, or most of them, are not in the band wagon. None who have been leaders in the strike will be taken back, and of course none who have committed violence will receive any consideration at the hands of the company's officials.

Chicago, July 17.—Debs expressed himself to-day as still in hope of winning the strike. "Hereafter we are not going to make our plans public before they are executed," he said. At noon to-day the strikers' headquarters were enlivened by speech-making. Debs roasted the newspapers. Debs charged the General Managers' Association with an abnormal lack of insincerity. "The strike is not over," he declared. "We are going to win. The railroads are running freight trains, but they are carrying little freight. Three months of this sort of thing and every railroad in Chicago will be bankrupt. The strike is still on and will be until we win." Aside from the crowd attracted by the addresses, the American Railway Union headquarters appeared almost deserted to-day. Now and then a "missionary" drifted into the office, but the usual crowd of the curious and the bustle that has heretofore pervaded the place were lacking.

Eucharistic Convention.

Covington, Ky., July 17.—It was announced to-day at the residence of Bishop Maes that final arrangements have been concluded for the first Eucharistic convention under the auspices of the Priests' Eucharistic League, and a call is being issued for the gathering to take place at Notre Dame, Ind., commencing August 7. This league numbers nearly thirty thousand members of the clergy, and was introduced into this country a few years ago through the efforts of the Bishops of Burlington and San Antonio. Three cardinals and over sixty bishops belonging to the United States belong to the association, and the coming convention will be one of the most important gatherings of the clergy ever held in this country.

CURIOUS HAILSTONES.

In Central America They Sometimes Contain Toads and Pebbles.

A gentleman connected with the Museo National (national museum) at San Jose, Costa Rica, in a private letter tells a graphic story of a wonderful hail storm which recently visited the southwest coast of that Central American republic. His letter, in part, is as follows:

"The cloud came almost directly from the west, and was blacker than the proverbial 'Egyptian darkness.' We are now well used to tropical storms, with their accompaniments of real thunder and lightning, something grander than the folks in old Missouri have ever seen or heard, but in this case it seemed a thousand squalls, hurricanes and cyclones combined in one. All of a sudden there was a terrible roaring and splashing in the bay near the camp. I have since thought that the only thing it could be compared with would be a shower of bricks and cobblestones falling into the ocean. We had hardly time to take shelter in an immense hollow guave when that portion of the cloud which was dumping its immense load of ice into the salty water veered to the northeast and crossed to the treeless tract of mountains lying over toward Hamfeta. It was not a hail storm in the grand, true sense of the word—it was simply an awful precipitation of thousands of tons of ice from the clouds. Some of these lumps were not larger than one's fists, but the majority of them were larger than full-sized building bricks, and one which buried itself in the sand near out camp kettle on the beach was a jagged, three-cornered mass of ice weighing 23 pounds an hour and a half hafter the clouds had past. As one of the boys afterward remarked: 'It seemed as if the cloud had been frozen solid to a depth of about six or eight inches and then suddenly knocked to pieces and thrown to the earth.' But few of the ice chunks bore the least semblance to ordinary hailstones; all were of jagged and irregular form, the majority of the pieces containing some foreign substance, such as a ball of earth, wads of rotten leaves, sand, fish and frog spawn, etc. The head of a dead sunfish was found in one piece, and a half a dozen or a dozen of the ice slabs gathered up and put into our water jar yielded two live and one dead frog, a mass of kelp, or sea-weed, three small pebbles, a sea shell and some queer black seeds the size of buck shot."—Atlanta Constitution.

HERE AND THERE.

The results of examinations of European statistics by M. Lagneau go to show that as among occupations consumption is most prevalent among persons whose work is sedentary, while persons living in the open air enjoy an almost complete immunity. From another point of view consumption appears of increase in towns rapidly with the density of the population.

Judge Ira Perley believed in the justice of his client's cause. He would not enlist in it otherwise. At one time a sharper tried to retain him, and was smoothing over his crooked conduct as well as he knew how, when the judge astonished him by exclaiming: "I think you have acted like an infernal scoundrel, sir!" "Is there any charge for that opinion?" "Yes, sir; $5!"—Argonaut.

The latest fad of the Parisian swells is the aluminum time piece. They are very light in weight, but a trifle more than the works. The cases are in a dull, black color very effective. Some are open-faced, some are often in a small 3-4 inch disc in the centre, with small gilt hands on the black face of the watch, but the are in all sorts of inlaid decoration in colorings, and the best of it is they are very reasonable in price. It is the custom at the gay capital for the gentry to carry this timepiece in the right trousers pocket, along with the keys, coin, matchbox and other paraphernalia of the masculine pocket. It is, moreover, the wont of the owners to rush the hand down in the pocket with great show of devil-may-care and bring forth the watch of which the material is unscratchable, from among the other articles, glance at the time and carelessly replace it with an air of certainty in its infallibility.—The Clothier and Furnisher.

Renowned though Switzerland be for the freedom and democracy of its institutions, there is no country in the world that is so drastic and severe in its treatment of inebriates. The laws vary in detail in the 22 cantons, but in their essential principles they are very simple, and provide for the punishment not only of those persons who indulge in strong drink to excess, but also for the people who supply the liquor in question. Drunkards are visited with penalties amounting to a maximum of a year's imprisonment with hard labor and three years' interdiction from exercising the franchise and from the purchase of any alcoholic drink, while the dealers and inn-keepers who permit their customers to become intoxicated or who furnish liquor to "interdicted" persons are likewise sentenced to the payment of heavy fines, imprisonment and forfeiture of license. Altogether Switzerland can scarcely be considered as a drunkard's paradise.—New York Tribune.

At Monteverde, France, Hannibal's war chests turns up full of Tarantine coins still worth par after 2000 years of burial, the metal of which they are composed remaining uncorroded and the Punic devices stamped upon them retaining their primal legibility. They were probably deposited in the soil then, in some unrecorded season of panic, fiscal or military, and in the pressure or confusion of after events forgotten. If they could have drawn interest during this interval their increment would rebuild Carthage and restore the mosaic pavements and scultured friezes of the temples of Baal and Melcarth, and set adrift again the flotillas of Byrsa and unroll the banners of Dido above the citadel. But they reappear with usufruct, dim with burial and disuse, and will find their way into museums and repositories of such ware, not helping any modern problem of finance or circulation, but pointing over again the moral that:

The bust outlasts the throne,
The coin, Tiberius.

The pikeman was covered with defensive armor, an iron neckpiece, iron "back and breast" and "tasses," a kind of iron apron, protecting him from the waist to the knee. He carried a pike sixteen feet long, with an ashen shaft, an iron head, and a blunt iron spike at the blunt end, whereby to fix it in the ground, and besides the pike a rapier. The pike, from its great length, was a weapon which required deft handling in order to be of effective use, and, as many imagined, was excessively showy on parade. The modern lance exercise is a pretty sight enough, but the old pike exercise, perfectly executed by a large body of men, must have been superb. We are not surprised, therefore, to find that the postures, or instructions, for this exercise are extravagantly minute. To give one example, at the close of the instruction, on the word, "Order your pikes," we find, after a mass of complicated details, the following conclusion: "You place the butt end of your pike by the outside of your right foot, your right hand holding it even with your eye, and your thumb right up; then, your left arm being set akimbo by your side, you shall stand with a full body in a comely posture."—Macmillan's Magazine.

FALB'S PREDICTIONS.

They Have for Years Been Correct in Almost Every Instance.

Falb's predictions of seismatic disturbances have been remarkably fulfilled. His prediction of the great earthquake at Zante last year was published in the newspapers all over the country the day before the earthquake occurred, says the New York Letter. Another example of his accurate forekowledge is shown in the fact that on March 31, 1893, he wrote to the Tourist club of Vienna accepting an invitation to lecture about earthquakes, but added that he would like better to defer the lecture until April 13th, as an earthquake would occur by that time which would aid him in giving them enlightenment. As a matter of fact an earthquake occurred April 8th that was felt all over Southern Hungary. Professor Falb's predictions go back over a number of years, have usually been made from nine to twenty months in advance and have almost in every instance been correct.

The latest prediction of Professor Falb is even more disturbing than any that he has heretofore made. He asserts that on November 13, 1899, that heavenly wanderer known as the comet of 1866 will reappear and collide with the earth; then will be the end of the earth so far as we are concerned.

Before that awful event occurs, however, there will be other happenings, only less direful because they are less universal. Professor Falb announces that he sees a great submarine earthquake getting ready for business this year, and that in July or August it will swamp the city of New York under a great tidal wave, while at the same time Florida and California will become islands.

These prophecies are scientific predictions based upon scientific investigations into the physical conditions of the earth. Prof. Falb believes all the deep down portion of the earth is filled with a molten mass which is subject to ebb and flow just like the waters of the ocean. Between the earth and the molten mass, which is gradually cooling, there is only a shell of an average of eighteen miles in thickness. In some places the earth's crust is thicker than in others. Where it is thinnest the confined terrible forces of the under world, chiefly in the form of gas, seek constantly to escape, and when the pressure of the atmosphere around the earth is lowest gas finds an outlet in well defined districts, generally through the volcanic vent holes.

But beyond the constant pressure of the gas Professor Falb has the theory that the molten mass beneath us is subject to the influences of the moon, which produces waves, and occasionally great tidal waves, which sweep around the inner crust of the world with terrific force, shaking the earth in its passage. Professor Falb has published every year a list of the days on which he expects seismic convulsions. These he calls "critical days," and these are the days when the moon approaches close to the earth. The critical days given by Prof. Falb for 1894 are stated in the order of maximum disturbances as follows: August 30th, September 29th, February 20th, March 31st, August 1st, April 6th, [illegible] 28th. Thus the most serious disturbance may be looked for August 30th and the slightest October 28th.

SEVEN STEPS TO HEALTH.

A Few Practical Hints on Living from a Noted Physician.

A noted physician says if you want to be healthy and live to a good old age you must climb up stairs and live at the top. The stairs consist of but seven steps, and you must make a pause on each step and follow his directions.

First step—Eat wheat, oats, corn, fruits, beef and mutton, plainly cooked, in moderate quantity, and but two meals a day.

Second Step—Breathe good air day and night.

Third Step—Exercise freely in the open air.

Fourth Step—Retire early and rise early.

Fifth Step—Wear flannel next your skin every day in the year, and so dispose your dress that your limbs will be kept warm. Bathe frequently.

Sixth Step—Live in the sunshine. Let your bedroom be one which receives a flood of light, and spend your days chiefly out in the sunlight or in a room which is well lighted.

Seventh Step—Cultivate a cheerful temper. Seek the society of jolly folks. Don't be afraid to laugh.

When, by reason of a cold or from other cause, the stomach, liver, and kidneys become disordered, as they should be, just stimulating them to action, Ayer's Pills act quickly, safely, and surely. Sold by druggists and dealers in medicines.

THE MUMMY.

Facts Connected With the Remains of the Egyptian Dead.

The preservation of the embalmed body or mummy was the chief end and every aim of the Egyptian who wished everlasting life, says Dr. E. A. Mallis Budge, in a book on "The Mummy." For the sake of the mumm's safety, tombs were hewn, papyri were inscribed with compositions the knowledge of which would enable the mummy to repel the attacks of demons, ceremonies were performed and services were recited; for the sake of the comfort of the mummy and his Ka, or genius, the tombs were decorated with scenes which would remind him of those with which he was familiar when upon earth, and they were also provided with many objects used by him in daily life, so that his tomb might resemble as much as possible his old home. Following up this idea, the author has given an account of the various methods of embalming; of the amulets and other objects which formed the mummy's dress; of the various kinds of coffins and sarcophagi in which the mummy was laid; of the ushabtiu and other figures, stela, vases, and other things which formed the furniture of a well-appointed tomb, and also of the most important classes of tombs hewn or built during different dynasties.

Mummy is the term which is generally applied to the body of a human being, animal, bird, fish or reptile, which has been preserved by means of bitumen, spices, gums or natron. So far as can be discovered, the word is neither a corruption of an ancient Egyptian word for a preserved body, nor of the more modern Coptic form of the hieroglyphic name. The word "mummy" is found in Byzantine Greek, and in Latin, and indeed in almost all European languages. It is derived from the Arabic word for "bitumen," and the Arabic word for mummy is "a bitumenized thing."

About three or four hundred years ago, the Egyptian mummy formed one of the ordinary drugs in apothecaries' shops. The trade in mummies was carried on chiefly by Jews, and as early as the 12th century, a physician called El-Magar was in the habit of prescribing mummies to his patients. I twas said to be good for bruises and wounds. After a time, for various reasons, the supply of genuine mummies ran short, and the Jews were obliged to manufacture them. They procured the bodies of all the criminals that were executed, and of peoples who had died in hospitals, Christians and others. They filled the body with bitumen and stuffed the limbs with the same substance; this done, they bound them up tightly and exposed them to the heat of the sun. By this means they made them look like old mummies. In the year 1564, a physician named Guy de la Fontaine made an attempt to see the stock of mummies of the chief merchant in mummies in Alexandria, and he discovered that they were made from the bodies of slaves and others who had died of the most loathsome diseases. The traffic in mummies as a drug was thus stopped. A Jew at Damietta, who traded in mummies, had a Christian slave who was treated with great harshness by him, because he would not consent to become a Jew. Finally, when the ill-treatment became unbearable, the slave went to the Pasha and informed him what his master's business was. The Jew was speedily thrown into prison, and obtained his liberty only by payment of three hundred pieces of gold. Every Jewish trader in mummies was seized by the local governor of the place where he lived, and money was extorted from him. The trade in mummies being hampered by these arbitrary proceedings, soon languished, and finally died out entirely.

Whether the art of mummifying was known to the aboriginal inhabitants of Egypt, or whether it was introduced by the newcomers from Asia, is a question which is very difficult to decide. It is certain that the Egyptians possessed at a remote period ample anatomical knowledge for mummifying a human body. The cost of embalming varied, according to the method pursued, from £250 to £60 or less.

The oldest mummy in the world, about the date of which there has been no dispute, is that of Seker-em-saf, son of Pepi I., B. C., 3200, which was found at Sakkarah in 1881, and is now at Gizeh.

The Egyptian Christians appear to have adopted the system of mummifying. Already in the third century of our era, the art had greatly decayed, and it cannot be said to have been generally in use at a period later than the fourth century. This seems to have been due to the growth of Christianity.

"Canopic jars" is the name given to the series of four jars in which the principal intestines of a deceased person were placed, well-steeped in bitumen. Each jar was dedicated to one of the four genii of the under-world, who represented the cardinal points, and each jar was provided with a cover which was made in the shape of the head of the deity to whom it was dedicated. Canopic jars first appeared [illegible] they continued until the 26th dynasty, after which time the Egyptians appear to have been careless about them and left the intestines in the body.

Of all the mummies found, none has excited greater interest than that of Rameses II., because he is generally supposed to be the Pharoah of the oppression and the father of the princess who found the child Moses in the bulrushes on the bank of the river. He reigned 67 years. His mumy was found in 1881, by Maspero, at Deir-el-Bahari, and identified in 1886.

GLASS HAS A WILL.

So Says One Who is Engaged in the Manufacture of It.

Glass is a substance which, as the glass-blower says, has a will of its own. It is very often difficult to tell how a particular piece is going to act under certain conditions, even after having tested other pieces of the same "batch." When subjected to the heat one end of the tube will sometimes respond differently from the other end. This is in a measure due to unequal chilling, occasioned possibly by a sudden draught of air while it is in process of manufacture. No piece of glass is absolutely reliable. Its working is therefore at certain stages most uncertain, and one person may have entirely different experiences from another. It is chameleonlike, and every process succeeds better with those who seem to have a knack, which is generally obtained by long practice.

The cutting of glass heads the list of the uncertain processes, for it has no definite cleavage and its separation is modified by the surrounding temperature. The simplest separation is on flat glass in a straight line. Here all that is necessary is a deep and regular scratch with a glazier's diamond, a firm and steady bend away from the main piece, and the parts crack along the desired line. These glazier's diamonds may be purchased and generally prove satisfactory, but it is more economical to purchase from some diamond cutter a small splinter and insert this in a piece of brass rod having a small hole drilled into one end. The splinter should now be cemented with marine glue, and the brass rod filed a little that the side nearest the ruler, to obtain, after a trial, the best cutting angle for the diamond. Another instrument for cutting glass, less expensive than the diamond, is the glass-blowers' knife, which is a piece of thin steel tempered glass-hard by heating it cherry red, and then plunging it into ice-cold water or mercury. The edge should be sharpened by rubbing it upon an old, rough emery grindstone until the fine saw-like notches appear. It is then ready for use, and should, if much used, be sharpened repeatedly.

To cut tubes, carefully scratch at right angles to the axis a deep notch, either with the diamond, a triangular file or a glass-blower's knife. Heat a piece of glass rod until a small globule at the end appears, and press this upon the scratch. The glass will thus be heated more at this point than at any other; an unequal expansion takes place, the scratch giving direction to the line of fracture, and the tube cracks evenly. If its thickness is uniform. In the case of variable thicknesses uneven edges result, and these must be filed down to avoid the sharp-cutting splinters. Many recipes and directions have been given for cutting bottles.

Wetting an asbestos string with turpentine and setting it on the fire produces considerable heat in the glass immediately underneath it. By quickly removing the string and plunging the bottle into cool water the unequal strain takes place and the parts separate. It is this locating of the heat that causes the glass to break as we wish it. The easiest method, if the means be at hand, is to employ a platinum wire, which should be heated white hot by the passage of a heavy electric current. By wrapping this wire around a heavy bottle or jar and allowing the current to pass for ten or fifteen seconds the stoutest walled vessel may be easily separated if touched on the heated line with a cloth dipped in water.—Optician.

A HUGE ALTERNATOR.

The Armature is Sixteen Feet in Diameter and Weighs 75,000 Pounds.

There is now in process of construction at the Schenectady works of the General Electric company an alternator of huge dimensions which is to be completed by August 16 for the Edison Illuminating company of St. Louis. The alternator is to be of sixteen thousand lights capacity and will be coupled direct to a Corliss Hamilton engine of two thousand horse power capacity, and will be one of the largest ever constructed. It is the first of a series to be constructed by the General Electric company for the St. Louis Lighting company and is of the new monocycle type adopted by the company, which comprises two windings of the armature, one being the ordinary straight winding of an alternating machine, the other producing an electromotive force at an angle of 90 degrees with that of the first winding. The advantages of this idea are greater flexibility in the system as well as greater ease in winding. As may be judged by the output of the machine, its dimensions and weight are very great, the armature being sixteen feet in diameter, the diameter of its shaft twenty inches and the weight of the armature without its shaft seventy-five thousand pounds. When completed the armature core and coils will be tested by an alternating current of five thousand volts. This huge alternator, which will be run at a speed of ninety revolutions a minute, making seventy-two thousand alternations a minute, an output at full load of eight hundred kilowatts with an electromotive force of twelve thousand volts, will have eighty field poles of laminated iron and an ironclad armature. The curve of the electromotive force will be a perfect sine curve, and a type of construction will be followed which will allow the fields to slide upon rails parallel to the axis of the armature, which will make it possible for ready access to be had for making repairs.—Western Electrician.

DOMINION FRANCHISE.

The rumor that Sir John Thompson intended to abandon his new franchise bill has proved correct, and for this year at least the old system of revising the voters' lists will be followed. As it is quite possible that an election may be held on the lists to be made up during the next two or three months, every man entitled to a vote should see that his name goes on. It may not be out of place to remind our readers that all who wish to qualify under the income and householder clauses must send applications to the revising officer. Of course those who are on the assessment roll will have their names placed on the list without any attention to the matter on their own part, but practically all others must register. Some persons whose names were on the old lists have the idea that they do not need to register anew. This is a mistake, for names are not transferred from the old to the new list; virtually only the assessment roll is taken as the basis of the latter. The date for the commencement of the revision has not yet been fixed, but it will no doubt be made known before long. The Times will, as usual, endeavor to keep its readers informed on all matters connected with the list and to afford all facilities in its power to those who wish to register.

PATRONS AND LIBERALS.

The success achieved by the Patrons of Industry in the recent Ontario elections has given rise to fresh speculation as to what the organization will accomplish in the next election for the house of commons. While the Patrons differed from the Mowat administration on a couple of minor points only, their platform is diametrically opposed to the policy of the Thompson government is more than one essential, notably the tariff. Therefore if their success in Ontario proves embarrassing to the provincial government, an equal amount of success in the Dominion election will make them so much the more formidable to the men now in office at Ottawa. The Liberals and the Patrons can well work together in the Dominion field, for their platforms are almost identical. An eastern paper's summary of the Patron Dominion platform is as follows:

Purity of administration and absolute independence of parliament.

Rigid economy in every department of the public service.

Simplification of the laws, and a general reduction in the machinery of government.

Abolition of the Canadian senate.

Tariff for revenue only, and so adjusted as to fall as far as possible upon the luxuries and not upon the necessaries of life.

Reciprocal trade on fair and equitable terms between Canada and the world.

Effectual legislation to protect labor from combines and monopoly.

Conformity of the electoral districts to county boundaries as constituted for municipal purposes, as far as the principle of "representation by population" will allow.

If this be compared with the following summary of the Liberal platform by the same paper the resemblance will be readily seen:

We cannot but view with alarm the large increase of the public debt and of controllable annual expenditure of the Dominion, and the consequent undue taxation of the people under the governments that have been continuously in power since 1878, and we demand the strictest economy in the administration of the country.

Reform in the senate to bring it into harmony with the principles of parliamentary government.

Tariff for revenue only, and so adjusted as to make free, or bear as lightly as possible, upon the necessaries of life.

Freer trade with the whole world, more particularly with Great Britain and the United States.

That the Franchise act should be repealed and that we should revert to the provincial franchise.

There is a difference in the two declarations regarding the senate, but it may be hoped that the Liberal party will yet take courage to occupy the same advanced ground as the Patrons in this particular. At all events, the Liberals and the Patrons can well combine their forces for an onslaught on the N. P. citadel when the next Dominion battle comes. Such a prospect is naturally disquieting to the defenders of the said citadel.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Albert Shaw, editor of the American edition of the Review of Reviews, has been studying municipal government in Canada in the hope of remedying as far as possible defects in the American system. Speaking to the Toronto Mail on the relative merits of the different civic systems, Mr. Shaw said that he preferred the English, which provided that out of every three aldermen elected, only one retired annually. Next in order of merit he placed the Canadian, and afterwards that of his own country. Mr. Shaw also spoke highly of the condition and paving of Toronto streets, preferring asphalt to any other pavement, and looking on vitrified brick as still too much in the experimental stage to allow of any distinct pronouncement on its merit. Block paving he did not so much approve of, particularly when cement was not used to give a solid foundation.

The French treaty has been ratified, only because the government's followers were left to the choice of voting for its ratification or voting want of confidence in the government. The Ottawa Citizen, a prominent government organ, said the other day: "The French treaty ratified on Tuesday evening, is not likely to excite great enthusiasm or effect the trade of the country much one way or the other. The French are a strictly protectionist people. They have very little faith in foreign commerce. They actually appear to think that they should seek to sell as scantily as possible and they are as sharp as Yankee wooden nutmeg vendors in driving a bargain. The one-sided provision as to the most favored national agreement is an instance of how they got ahead of us in the present instance." The government will be apt to watch Tupper the elder more closely in the event of his negotiating another treaty.

Speaking in advance of the vote on the Turcotte case the Montreal Star said:—"A member of parliament should not dabble in government contracts. It is not enough for him to evade conviction under the letter of the law; he must be above suspicion. But in the Turcotte case, it is hard to see that even the storied coach-and-four of the accused gets through. Provost swears that he gave the government checks received on account of the militia contract over to Turcotte; and Larose admits that he received the profits of the marine contract in lieu of a demanded increase of salary from Turcotte's firm. The government, have, of course, a majority large enough and probably subservient enough to apply the needed coat of whitewash, if the leaders give the word; but the ministry will not strengthen its position in saving one man by a resolution which will array Messrs. Weldon, Dickie and McCarthy with the opposition. The country is becoming more careful of the independence of parliament than it formerly was; and this will be a bad time to let through so doubtful a case—to put it in its most favorable light. As we see it, the case is not at all doubtful and Turcotte ought to go." The majority, nevertheless, showed that they cared very little for the independence of parliament, and the whitewash was duly applied.

CANADIAN NEWS.

The News of Eastern Canada in Short Paragraphs.

As a result of Immigration Inspector O'Brien's recent order that no persons should be employed by corporations in Niagara Falls, N. Y., while living in Canada, a large number of Canadians have moved across the line.

Dr. Smith, superintendent of the Dominion lazaretto at Tracadie, N. B., diagnosed the case of the supposed leper, Thomas Sheehan, quarantined in the pest house on the outskirts of Niagara Falls for the past three weeks. He diagnosed the case as not one of leprosy, but an incurable one of another disorder.

Sheriff Archibald of Halifax formally seized, at the instance of the Dominion government, under process issued from the admiralty court at Halifax, the U. S. fishing schooner Henry L. Phillips, for alleged infraction of customs laws. The case will be tried at Halifax. The seizure was made at Port Hawkesbury by the customs collector several days before.

A sensational abortion case will come before the Montreal courts shortly. The police magistrate was called from the police court the other day to take the dying deposition of Louise Davis, a young French-Canadian woman, who confessed to having undergone an operation. The authorities refuse to disclose the facts of the confession until further proceedings are taken. The party implicated is said to be a prominent member of parliament, and sensational developments are expected.

There has been a great commotion during the past few days among the clerks of the audit office of the C. P. R. at Montreal. It seems about twenty of them made and endorsed notes for the benefit of each other and that these notes were discounted by a notorious money lender for 8 per cent. per month. Many of the notes, which aggregated hundreds of dollars, were not met, and the money lender had writs taken out against the clerks. The writs came into the office so fast that the attention of the officials was called to the facts and as a result two of the clerks were compelled to resign, and others will have to follow suit unless the matter is settled at once.

It is understood at Ottawa that important changes have been decided upon respecting the Northwest Mounted Police. The numerical strength of the force will probably be reduced a little. This is more than compensated for by the establishment of three batteries, to be stationed at central points, and the improvement in the armament of the force by substituting the Lee-Metfor magazine carbine for the Winchester now used. The two batteries will consist of one seven pounder each. The third will be a Maxim gun. New arms will be purchased in England this summer. The force is at present composed of 934 men in six divisions stationed at 80 points. Commissioner Herchmer last year reported that the Winchester carbines were in poor condition and in sighting great judgment was required to shoot well.

TIDAL ACTION OF WELLS.

Peculiar Subterranean Formation in Nebraska.

There is a peculiar district, or rather a peculiar subterranean formation in the Platte river valley in Nebraska, involving more particularly the counties of Colfax, Butler and Polk. This is the region of the singular roaring wells, whose waters also rise and fall a clearly defined tidal period. Of the three counties mentioned Polk leads, having sixteen or eighteen of these curiosities. There are hours when the water will gradually rise, and during this time the wells exhale such a quantity of air as to make a strong current, which is accompanied by a roaring sound which can be heard to a considerable distance. After a short interval of quiescence the ebb sets in, the water slowly falling and the inhalation that follows is as if the air at the mouth of the well were in a mad rush to follow the receding tide.

From these facts an impression prevails in many minds that Nebraska, Kansas and a portion of the Indian territory rest on an immense subterranean sea. In suport of this position it is alleged that square miles of land have disappeared in Kansas, leaving lakelets of unfathomable depth instead. While it is true that the other regions mentioned also occasionally exhibit wells having this roaring feature, there is nothing in this to sustain the view of an underground lake or sea, certainly not as we understand these terms when they are applied to bodies of water on the surface. Nor is it by any means uncommon for a portion of the surface to sink from sight, a case of this kind having recently occurred during the earthquake in Venezuela, in South America, and the "sunken country" in the vicinity of New Madrid, on the Mississippi river, having disappeared in a prolonged seismic disturbance in 1811-12.

While it may not be generally known it is nevertheless a fact that some of Pennsylvania's gas wells have exhibited the peculiar tidal tendency, and while in many instances the drill has been penetrated below the ocean level it does not necessarily follow that any of these wells, either of water or gas, are in communication with the sea. What would seem far more probable is that these wells may communicate with areas that have more or less connection with the mobile interior, and where we may logically infer that there is also a tidal manifestation. All the Nebraska roaring wells extend down to a porous stratum, presumably surface in some previous age, and it is probable that the water lying among the loose material of the former bed is in some way affected by pressure exerted against it by the earth's internal tides. When the recession takes place it is only natural that there should be a suction inward and an expulsion when the flow sets in. The occasional subsidence of surfaces below water level can be readily accounted for apart from any theory of underground oceans, which is entirely untenable. But these remarkable wells are worth of a more careful observation than they have yet received.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

The French, who have carried the art of hardening plaster to where it is utilized for flooring, either in place of wood or tile, use six parts of good quality of plaster of Paris to one part of freshly slacked white lime finely sifted. This mixture is then laid down as quickly as possible, care being taken that the trowel is not used on it for too long a time. The floor, adds the National Builder, should then be allowed to become very dry, and afterwards be thoroughly saturated with sulphate of iron or zinc, the iron giving the strongest surface, the resistance to breaking being twenty times the strength of ordinary plaster. With sulphate of zinc the floor remains white, but when iron is used it becomes the color of rusted iron; but if linseed oil, boiled with litharge, be applied to the surface, it becomes a beautiful mahogany color. Especially is this the case if a coat of copal varnish is added.

The party left on Monday evening for a short cruise in the sloop Pymont. A German who lives near the beach heard cries during the night, but, as he expressed himself, "Oh, I did not have time to bother." Yesterday morning a search party set out. They saw the sloop just off shore with Nelson clinging to her. One of the party started to swim to the rescue, but before he reached the upturned sloop Nelson threw up his hands and with a despairing shake of his head slipped into the water and sank out of sight. Johnson was a brother-in-law of Charles E. Mallette, formerly of this city, and was manager of the Port Angeles water works. He leaves a large family. Nelson and Deibold were unmarried.

—Grass fires at Beacon Hill have again commenced to give the members of the fire department a great deal of trouble. —Johnny, the insane Chinese domestic, is still confined to a cell in the police barracks. It is not determined fully yet to send him to Westminster asylum. Some of his friends have expressed a willingness to take charge of him and send him home to his people in China. Johnny's jailors watch him very closely now, as yesterday one of them caught him trying to throw his queue through one of the upper bars of the window in his cell.

—The sealing schooner George R. White sailed from Seattle for Behring Sea on Monday. The schooner is in command of Captain Jack Wheeler, who was in command of the little schooner Volunteer when she, as alleged, led the war ship Mohican such a long chase not long ago. The White carries five boats with one hunter for each boat, the captain going as one of the hunters. Besides the hunters she has a crew of nine seamen and a cook. She is well provisioned for the trip and will be gone from Seattle several months.

—The drawing room atmosphere of "Lady Windermere's Fan," which is to be seen at the opera house Friday evening, is greatly appreciated by the better element of theatre-goers. The third act in which a number of blase club men are sitting around in Lord Darlington's rooms, sipping brandy and soda and smoking cigarettes, while firing off rockets of wit and epigram, makes as enjoyable a 20 minutes as could be put in a play. The ladies of the company dress gorgeously and their toilettes create a sensation among the feminine contingent of theatre-goers.

—London Engineering of June 29 says: The S.S. Miowera, built by Messrs. C. S. A mean speed of 17 knots was obtained. Her length is 357 feet, beam 42 feet 3 inches and depth 28 feet. The engines, constructed by the Wallsend Shipping and Engineering Co., have cylinders 33 inches, 53 inches and 85 inches in diameter by 54 inch stroke, from boilers of steel, working at a pressure of 165 pounds on Howden's forced draught system. The electric lighting is by Messrs. J. H. Holmes & Co., and consists of 300 lights.

THEY ARE HOMEWARD BOUND.

The steam schooner Albion, of the North American Trading company, arrived here this morning from San Francisco via Seattle. She is commanded by Captain Lundquist, and will remain here until to-morrow night, leaving then for St. Michael's, Alaska. At the latter point she will connect with the steamer P. B. Weare for points along the Yukon river as far as Forts Cudahy and Selkirk. The latter is 1900 miles up the river. The Albion will receive several shipments of freight here, and will altogether have about three hundred tons. She has 24 passengers, ten of whom make up a party of Esquimos. They came down nearly two years ago to take part in the World's Fair. At the close they were exhibited in New York, Boston and Philadelphia, met the great chieftain at Washington and took part in the Midwinter Fair. Seven are adults and three are children. One child left the party at Seattle to go to St. Louis, where it is to be educated. One of the women is a princess of royal Esquimo blood. She is rather a handsome woman. The natives have not ceased to wonder at our civilization, but the beat takes all the civilization out of them. On days like this they pray for the shady side of an iceberg. They will be glad to get home. One of the party performed a feat which has probably never been equalled. He jumps in the air and kicks a tambourine with both feet two feet above his head. The party are in charge of Miner Bruce and will be taken to Port Clarence from St. Michael's by the Albion. The Esquimos were very anxious to call upon the "Esquimalts."

LYNN ON TRIAL.

Savary Island Murder Case—Prisoner Pleads Not Guilty.

The trial of Hugh Lynn, charged with the murder of Green and Taylor, ranchers on Savary island, in October last, commenced at Vancouver yesterday. Hon. A. N. Richards and Deputy Attorney-General Smith appeared for the crown and E. P. Davis for the defence. The prisoner pleaded not guilty in a firm voice. Prison fare has apparently agreed with Lynn, who is stouter and looks much better than when arrested. The evidence to-day was uninteresting, being of a technical character, the first links in the chain of circumstantial evidence the prosecution claim they will be able to weld together. Hon. Mr. Richards opened the case for the prosecution, briefly addressing the jury. Mr. Bledsoe, the first witness, identified numerous plans and photographs of various localities. Norman Smith gave evidence as to the finding of the bodies, giving details as to their position and the condition of the premises. Mr. Hansen gave corroborative testimony, having been present with Smith when he made his discovery.

WELL ENDORSED.

The New Great Syndicate Circus Earns Lavish Praise.

The New Great Syndicate Shows and Paris Hippodrome will exhibit at the Fountain lot on Thursday and Friday of next week. The Louisville Courier-Journal, Henry Watterson's paper, thus speaks of this great show: "This excellent circus and menagerie was well patronized yesterday afternoon and evening, and it well deserved the enormous crowd which flocked to the capacious tents. The menagerie shows up all that has been advertised, and the ring performances were excellent, comprising many very difficult, attractive acts never before presented here. The riding was good. The clowns introduced many new comicalities, and the feats of acrobats, jugglers and contortionists were marvellous, and astonished and delighted all. We found all connected with the show perfect gentlemen, who desired to treat everyone well and see that no one was imposed upon."

As this is the only large show that will visit this section this season a large crowd is predicted.

UNDER THE HACHISCH.

A Graphic Description of an Experience With the Drug.

We were five comrades, seated on a circular divan around a richly served table. The breakfast, which had been the means of bringing us together, was not an ordinary breakfast. Scarcely were we seated when two lackeys entered the room, one carrying a quaintly chased silver coffer, which he placed on the table before our host, the celebrated Dr. M—; the other bore a tray on which were placed tiny cups of Turkish coffee in their outer cups of filigree silver. The doctor drew the coffee toward him and gravely opened it. He took therefrom several boxes of rock crystal, one of which was half full of a greenish sort of compound. "Here," said he, "we have the substance in question in all its possible forms—in a powder for the Narghily smoker, in an oily extract, in a spirituous one, and even cleverly disguised in sweets and conserves. It is under the latter cloak that I recommend it to you as being most pleasant to swallow; its taste is sufficiently agreeable when prepared with pistachio nuts, like that which I procured yesterday." "Does one run no risk by using this drug?" "By some learned men it is asserted to be quite innoxious; but it would be difficult for me to share their conviction, for I think that a too frequent use of it would induce cerebral congestion, and certainly the pitiable condition of those individuals who are given up to this passion seems to me sufficiently instructive. But I believe that one may occassionally use it without any marked ill effect. I, who am speaking to you, have taken it close on 200 times, and I am none the worse for it. Even if disagreeable experiences do follow, they are, I repeat, so very curious that he who has not exposed himself to them, once at least, can scarcely say that he has lived. And now, gentlemen, if you please, let me offer a dose of hachisch to each of you." So saying, he gave us a small teaspoonful of the converse. "Doctor," said I, as I wish to be completely under the influence of the drug, will you please to increase the dose for me?" "If you wish it I will do so."

Here the servants brought in the different dishes, and as our host has the reputation of being a "gourmet," it is needless to say that the breakfast is exquisite. Each and all did honor to the repast, and during quite a good half hour I felt nothing in any way abnormal; but when the meal was drawing to a close, a subtle warmth, which came as it were in gusts to my head and chest, seemed to permeate my body with a singular emotion. Later on, the conversation around me reached my understanding charged with droll insignificance. The noise of a fork tapped against a glass struck my ear as a most harmonious vibration. The faces of my companions were transformed. The particular animal type—which, according to Lavater, is the base of every human countenance—appeared to me strikingly clear. My right hand neighbor became an eagle; he on my left grew into an owl, with full projecting eyes; immediately in front of me the man was a lion, while the doctor himself was metamorphosed into a fox. Objects around me seemed little by little, to clothe themselves in fantastic garb, the arabesques on the walls revealed themselves to me in rich rhymes of attractive poesy—sometimes melancholy, but more generally rising to an exaggerated tyrism, or to transcendant buffoonery. The porcelain vases, the bottles, the glasses sparkling on the table, all took the most ludicrous forms. At the same time I felt creeping around the region of my heart a tickling pressure, to squeeze out, as it were, with general force, a laugh which burst forth with noisy violence. My neighbors, too, seemed subjected to an identical influence, for I saw their faces unfold like peonies—victims of boisterous hilarity, holding their sides and rolling about from right to left, their countenances swollen like Titans! My voice seemed to have gained considerable strength, for when I spoke it was as if it were a discharge of cannon, and long after I had uttered a sentence I heard in my brain the reverberation, as it were, of distant thunder. Thoughts seized on me with fury, and unchained and disentangled themselves by torrents in my brain and developed a rapid succession of geometrical combinations, which appeared to be the simplest, as well as the most exact, expresions of those ideas which one is obliged to render in an approximate manner by prolix words of gross moulding. Besides all this, I lost completely the idea of time.

As the action of the hachisch is intermittent, I gradually came back to my own identity and believed that the effect of the drug was exhausted, I thought it time to withdraw myself and leave to their respective dreams my companions, who were to much absorbed to trouble themselves in my departure. But scarcely had I set foot on the pavement outside the house than the effect of the drug, which had in a measure subsided, seized upon me again with redoubled force. Here words utterly fail me to express the utterly incomprehensible agony which ran through all my being! Sometimes I felt that my feet took root in the earth, and that I was sinking up to my neck in the soil, and that I could only draw my feet out with the greatest difficulty, each step seeming to have hundred of pounds weight attached to them. Then I appeared to be gifted with the lightness of a sponge, and I remember that I held firmly on to a tree, fearing that I should suddenly disappear in the air with the velocity of a balloon. Vibrations like shocks of electricity ran through me. An iron hand seemed to have got hold of my brain and was crushing it; I was seized with dizziness, and I suffer even now when I think how intense was my suffering.

LEARNING MADE LOVELY.

[illegible] when learning was naturally expected to go plainly dressed. Even to-day, in a country like Germany, one would not be surprised to be told that a collar had not sat upon the neck of some wise professor while at his desk in one of the ancient universities for years, or to observe that his coat was chiefly marked by dust or snuff colored decorations, while his boots were total strangers to polish.

How gloriously things have changed since lovely woman entered the academic arena. Now learning begins to have some style about it. We read that one of the sweet girl graduates wore last week "a robe of cream colored crepe de chine of the empire style, with bertha and gold spangled lace."

How tame a figure is the traditional seedy old professor of Heidelberg or Bonn, though buried in Greek roots and steeped in ancient lore, beside the charming graduating damsel who expounds the mysteries of the muses with "raven hair caught low at the neck with a bunch of blush roses."

One lovely girl graduate was described last week, from the standpoint of her gown, as being "an artist through and through," and the graduating dresses of not a few learned damsels were prepared with almost as much study and care as the graduating theses. In fact, the dress of one young lady class poet is described as being "a poem in itself."

Thanks to modern advancement, learning is casting off its old clothes and arraying itself most gloriously. And we owe the coming of the sweet-scented muses of to-day to the wisdom which has opened the door to woman. For the first time in history learning may truly be called lovely.

"IN MY SERAGHLIO."

How a Citizen of the States May Legally Commit Bigamy.

The idea that a decent, orderly citizen may not keep more than one wife without getting himself into trouble has just been exploded by Mr. Clipperton, Her Britannic Majesty's consul at Philadelphia. This gentleman, in a report to the foreign office, shows how in America one may keep a whole bevy of wives without breaking the law, provided only that he keeps only one in each state. The consul says: "Nineteen states have created commissions to act together in framing a uniform marriage code for all the states. The necessity for this is often exemplified. A case in point occurred last summer, when a Philadelphian went to Ohio and obtained a divorce, his wife being still a resident in Philadelphia. Returning, he married a Philadelphia widow. Subsequently the first wife denied the legality of the decree of divorce, on the ground that she had received no notice of the proceedings. The Ohio courts did not support her contention and the divorce was maintained. The first wife appealed in the Pennsylvania courts for support from her 'husband.' The Pennsylvania courts did not regard the Ohio divorce as valid in Pennsylvania, and ordered the 'husband to pay $5 a week for the support of his wife.' Thus the man found himself possbound to support and with whom he was bound to support and with who she was legally entitled to live. The judge gave it as his opinion that he could not be prosecuted for bigamy in Pennsylvania, as the deed was not committed in that the marriage was legal, as the divorce was granted there; and that it is possible for a man to have divorced wives in various states, that are only considered legal in those states, and yet not be liable for polygamy."

NAVAL MOBILIZATION.

France's Remarkable Achievement of a Few Weeks Ago.

A remarkably quick bit of naval mobilization appears to have been done by the French at Toulon, immediately after the announcement of the death of the Emperor of Morocco, and there seems to be very little doubt that the government expected serious trouble. The correspondent at Toulon of a London newspaper writes: "At an early hour on Monday morning Vice-Admiral de Boissoudy, the commander-in-chief, received on board his battleship, the Formidable, moored in Toulon roadstead, a cipher telegram from the minister of marine ordering him to prepare at once for the departure of one of the three divisions composing his squadron. The admiral immediately selected four of his fastest ships, all armed with quick-firing guns, and while their commanders proceeded to the Formidable for instructions, provisions and ammunition were rapidly taken in. As the Neptune could not be got ready as promptly as other ships, it was left behind with orders to join them as soon as possible, and five hours after the receipt of the minister's orders the Hoche Lalande, and Tage started on their voyage. It was then 20 minutes to 1 p.m., and at half-past three the Neptune—which is the best sailer in the squadron doing 19 knots an hour with ease—was speeding after them in a heavy sea, with a westerly gale blowing. Provisions for the crwe sufficient to last three months had been shipped, and the rapidity with which food and ammunition were put on board is considered a remarkable achievement at Toulon. The order from Paris was totally unexpected, yet within five hours a division, with nearly two thousand seamen and with 64 guns, was able to put to sea. In naval circles at Toulon this performance is regarded as a very conclusive and practical reply to all the criticisms indulged in at the expense of the crew sufficient to last three months But this is not all. It is added that, as a further precaution, Vice-Admiral de Boissoudy was ordered to hold another division in readiness to sail at a moment's notice, and that all the ships undergoing repairs in the Toulon dockyards were being placed with the utmost haste in a position to put to sea."

Whether Pasteur and Koch's peculiar modes of treatment will ultimately prevail or not, their theory of blood contamination is the correct one, though not original. It was on this theory that Dr. J. C. Ayer, of Lowell, Mass., nearly fifty years ago, formulated Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

WATERLOO FRAUDS.

The neighborhood of Waterloo is celebrated for its romancists. Students of theosophy will be interested to know that men who are quite young even now fought gallantly in the battle of Waterloo, which took place some seventy-nine years ago. They will tell you all about the fray, where the blood flowed like water from a fireman's hose and where they performed prodigious feats of valor—for a small pecuniary consideration. Most of the guides under fifty years of age are Waterloo veterans.

The locality is filled with relic hunters, who would be saying a great deal of money if they went to Birmingham, where they make relics and sell them dirt cheap, even blood stains included. I was offered a stray piece of one of Wellington's ribs for forty francs, and I came across no fewer than eight of the pocket knives of Blucher. A pair of boots, said to have belonged to Wellington, are going cheap, as are five watch chains, "late the property of His Grace the Duke of Wellington, and as worn by him in battle."

The average relic hunter is a stupid gull. It is well known that Wellington was in the thick of the battle, but for some strange reason it got abroad that he sheltered himself under a tree during the progress of the fight. Will it be believed this tree has totally disappeared, the relic hunters alving chipped it to pieces with pocket knives?

Waterloo is a strange locality. In one garden a peasant has erected a monument to the leg of the Marquis of Anglesea, and not very far off is a well which cannot be used for the very good reason that it is full of skeletons.

Three conclusions may be drawn from the existing geographical distribution of the Jews. In the first place it is evident that they have never before been so widely dispersed as at the present time. Secondly, the migratory tendency of the race is clearly from the east to the west, in spite of the fact that not a few of the Jews seem to have their faces "steadfastly set towards Jerusalem." And, thirdly, it is plain that, in spite of his indisputable Asiatic origin, the modern Israelite is distinctly European, while even the Jews who move east ward, to Palestine or elsewhere, carry a European language along with them.

"Only the Scars Remain,"

"Among the many testimonials which I see in regard to certain medicines performing cures, cleansing the blood, etc., none impress me more than my own case. Twenty years ago, at the age of 18 years, I had swellings come on my legs, which broke and became running sores. Our family physician could do me no good, and it was feared that the bones would be affected. At last, my good old to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I took three bottles, the sores healed, and I have not been troubled since. Only the scars remain, and the memory of the past, to remind me of the good Ayer's Sarsaparilla has done me. I now weigh two hundred and twenty pounds, and am in the best of health. I have been on the road for the past twelve years, have noticed Ayer's Sarsaparilla advertised in all parts of the United States, and always take pleasure in telling what good it did for me."

Mother Urged Me

THE SMART C. P. R.

How the St. John People Got Fooled on the Wheat Project.

A Winnipeg citizen who has recently returned from a visit to the Maritime Provinces brings home a funny little story from St. John, N. B.. The C. P. R. has an elevator in that city, towards the construction of which it voted $40,000 of a bonus. The elevator was built for $33,000, and the company is consequently ahead an elevator and $7,000 in cash. But that by the way. A St. John newspaper man was asked why the elevator was built, and he replied that it was to accommodate the wheat trade of the Northwest, and he in turn asked why it was the crop of last year was not yet shipped out. When told that it had all been shipped long ago he expressed great surprise and not a little disappointment, as not a bushel of it had gone through that $40,000 elevator. They were promised the Northwest wheat trade in return for the bonus, and scarcely yet believing that they had been deceived he demanded to know where the wheat had gone and how. The answer of course was that the quantity exported had gone to England via Boston and New York. In listening to this story the first sensation is one of amazement at the ignorance of Northwest affairs displayed by the St. John people, who have been waiting up till now to see our wheat of last season go through their elevator. The rest of course is so characteristic of the C. P. R. that we are amazed rather at the absolute perfection of its consistency in plundering all along the line, whether east or west.—Nor'wester.

FOR POULTRY KEEPERS

A Virginian's Plan for Keeping the Hen House Free form Vermin.

Some years since, when removing to a new place where there was a scarcity of out buildings, our poultry was put into a cellar to roost. The house was an unused kitchen and the basement walls were of brick. The interior was dry and with a temperature quite uniform the year round. It was warm in winter and cool in summer. Altogether the basement proved a very good place for poultry, and after a few months I concluded to fix it up permanently. On removing the former roosts and nests to provide better ones I was surprised to find that there was no vermin upon any of the timbers nor anywhere within the cellar. The poultry must have had vermin when they were first put into the basement, for the old house from which they were taken showed it plainly enough. I now put the basement in thorough order, everything tidy, with new nests and new roosts. From that time I watched the cellar closely for vermin, but none were ever observed there. I kept poultry in that basement for about six years, a time long enough certainly to test thoroughly the matter, and from beginning to end no vermin were ever seen therein. I am sure of this fact, for the discovery was so remarkable that I made repeated examinations to see if any vermin could be found and to discover, if I could, the cause of its absence. It certainly was new to me to have a poultry house without vermin, and I never had poultry in better condition or laying better than during those six years.

I found the poultry business both pleasant and profitable. Yet I never could decide what it was that kept the parasites away from the fowls and the house, except it may have been the brick walls, that were always a little cool and moist to the touch of the hand, and probably not suited to the life of the vermin. Whatever the true cause may be, the fact remains that this basement poultry house with walls of brick surrounded with earth nearly to the top on the outside, with a good roof overhead, and kept clean and dry, made a roosting place where no vermin would come to feed upon and annoy the fowls.—American Agriculturist.

"FOOLS BUILD HOUSES."

A Melbourne Man Who Provided a House for Another.

Some years ago a magnificent house was being erected in a fashionable suburb in Melbourne. Every day an old man would go and inspect the building. The old man was deaf, and carried an ear trumpet. His visits were long, and the foreman and workmen complained of his presence. Every Friday the man for whom the house was being built came to see how the work progressed; and he also was angry at seeing the old deaf man pottering around the place. The objectionable person always greeted him with a smile and made complimentary remarks, and also gave unsolicited advice as to the thickness of the walls and other things. One day, when the house was nearly completed, he asked the gentleman if another story would not be a great improvement. The gentleman got angry and told him that he had been a nuisance ever since the foundations had been laid. The deaf man "hoped there was no harm done," and withdrew. But he was there again the following Friday with his accustomed smile. At last the owner was so angry that he said he would give the old fellow in charge if he ever came on the building again. Even this did not keep him away, and the next Friday the man again was seen on the building; but this time he was accompanied by his wife, who expressed herself pleased with the edifice. Again the gentleman warned him off. When the house was finished the old deaf man presented £1 to each of the men engaged upon the building. When the gentleman came again to pass the work the deaf man and his wife were present. "Now, I have told you time after time I don't want you here," said the gentleman. "But my dear sir, I came here to thank you for building such a lovely house on my land!" The gentleman had believed that the sight would never be claimed, and that the certificate for the land had been lost at sea. The fact was that the old owner of the ground had been drowned, but before he left Australia he had transferred his property to his sister, who was the old man's wife. The house cost £3000 to build, and the land was valued at £900 before any building was on it. The gentleman had eventually to pay £2000 or forfeit all interest in the house. He agreed to give the money.

THE MOON OF ROMANCE.

It is Generally Made to Rise at the Wrong Time of Day.

The novelist will not leave the "young moon" or the "crescent moon" alone, and three times out of four they contrive to get it into the wrong place. How to explain the conviction which haunts the minds of so many of them that the crescent moon may be seen almost any fine evening rising gracefully in the east is altogether beyond us. The point seems to be one for psychologists. Here is a thing that never was seen since the world began, and yet a number of otherwise sane men are firmly persuaded that it is a regular recurring natural phenomenon. Surely the philosophy of this hallucination deserves investigation. The last case that has come under our notice is a well-written story called "A Comedy of Masks," by Ernest Dawson and Arthur Moore. Two friends are sitting out one summer evening looking over the Thames and the story goes on: "By this time the young moon had risen, and its cold light shimmered over the misty river." A novelist need not be an astronomer, but he should at least try to draw from nature, and should not pretend to have seen the young moon rising at the hour when it was packed off to bed. Some day, perhaps, a little acquaintance at first hand with the broadest facts of nature will be thought a requisite for writing a good novel, but the time is not yet. Meantime, if our novelists would try to bear in mind that the young moon, like other young things, goes to bed early—that nature does not trust it out late at night—they might get into the way of seeing it at the right time, and in the right places, and not treat us to "cold shimmers" that are only moonshines in the least favorable sense of the term.

A singular blunder occurs in an article entitled "Notes from a Marine Biological Laboratory," written by a man of science and a college professor, and printed in the February number of this magazine. It reads as follows: It was a beautifully clear and starry night when we sailed into the windward passage. The grey mountains of Cuba outlined against the northern horizon were slowly fading from view, where the crescent moon arose out of the waves in the east."—Popular Science Monthly.

A blast of 1100 pounds of dynamite in twenty-seven holes was made recently at a quarry near Providence, R. I., blowing off the face of a cliff and dislodging about ten thousand tons of coal, some of the blocks weighing nearly twenty-five tons. The holes were twenty feet deep, and the drilling is said to have cost $1,000, with $250 more for the explosive.

A scientific authority, quoted by the Indianapolis News, states that by saturating a bullet with vaseline its flight may be easily followed by the eye from the time it leaves the muzzle of the rifle until it strikes the target. The course of the bullet is marked by a ring of smoke, caused by the vaseline being lifted on leaving the muzzle of the gun.

NANAIMO NEWS.

A Political Rumor Denied—Mr. Marchant Delivers an Address.

Nanaimo, July 18.—At the regular meeting of the Reform club, held last evening, the following resolution was adopted: "Whereas a rumor has been circulated and published that the opposition party in the city of Nanaimo are desirous of having Mr. Cotton resign his position in the local house, be it resolved that this club expresses its confidence in Mr. Cotton and declares the aforesaid rumor to be unauthorized and false."

W. Marchant, of Victoria, delivered a very interesting address at the meeting. His subject embraced the national policy and the changes recently made in the tariff. Mr. Marchant will shortly address a public meeting in this city, when he will deal with A. Haslam's maiden speech.

The news of a sad drowning accident reached town yesterday from Alberni. From the information obtained a little child five years old of Mr. Faber fell into Sproat lake, and two cousins, Emma, aged 20, and Mary, 18, went to her rescue, and all three were drowned.

David Tatum, the Quaker evangelist, delivered an address to a gathering of the young folks in the Y. M. C. A. rooms last evening, taking for his subject "The home and the saloon, and how to save the boys." The meeting was largely attended and the lecture appeared to be appreciated.

Everything for the grand Foresters' gathering to be held here on Saturday has been completed and the day promises to be a big one. The prizes for the various sports are numerous and embrace athletics of every description.

AN INTERESTING CONTEST.

Siwash v. Polynesian—A Canoe Race at Oak Bay.

One of our local athletes has challenged the manager of the South Sea Island company to allow some of his canoeists to compete with some picked Siwash Indians. The challenge has been accepted, and the contest is to take place on Saturday afternoon at Oak Bay.

The first race is to be in small canoes. Each canoe is to be launched, paddled half a mile around a stake boat and back to the starting point, where it is to be hauled up.

The second race is to be between canoes carrying two men, conditions being the same.

The South Sea Islanders having no large canoes fit for racing have through their manager expressed their willingness to pull a picked number of Indians in an Indian canoe of large dimensions, two or three miles distance, and they are willing at the conclusion of the races with the small canoes to take the canoes which have been used by the Indians and let the Indians use theirs and then to pull the race again, thus testing both the men and their boats.

A Gilbert Island sailing catamaran canoe of very curious construction will sail on the waters of Oak Bay as soon as it is unpacked and rigged. In strong breezes it is said to be a very fast boat.

Such a thing as a canoe contest between American Indians and South Sea Islanders has never yet taken place. Both are doubtless very expert in the use of the paddle, and both construct their canoes on an entirely different principle. Hence in this trial both men and craft will be put to the test.

ALASKA MINES.

Encouraging Reports—Hope for the Bear Nest—The Bennett Mine.

Late Alaskan papers contain mining news of a highly interesting nature. Superintendent N. S. Trowbridge and family, and Foreman P. Moul, with 12 men, have left Juneau city on the steamer Yukon for Sum Dum to begin operations on the Bald Eagle mine. The steamer had the company's scow, 18x40, in tow, loaded with 18,000 feet of lumber, tools, tents and supplies. A boarding house and office will be immediately erected, and the road from the beach to the mine built. As soon as this is done, the mine will be worked and ore taken out to be shipped on the Topeka to the Tacoma smelter. The Topeka stops at the mine on the next trip to unload three horses, ore sacks and supplies shipped from San Francisco. All work will be pushed energetically to get the mine in shape before the winter season sets in.

The sinking of the hoisting shaft at the Treadwell mine will determine the value of the ore and mine at a greater depth. If it shows the ledge richer as greater depth is attained, the value of this mining property will be increased into high figures, and it will demonstrate another important fact and settle the value of the ledge to the westward. It has been the belief of practical and experienced miners that mining on Douglas Island has only begun, and that the ore exists in sufficient quantities in the midst of the site of Douglas City to support double the mining public now dependent upon the Treadwell and Mexican companies. The Beaumont mine has proved itself highly satisfactory to the management, and the shaft now down 35 feet is in ore sulphurets of a very encouraging character. A contract has been let by N. S. Trowbridge to sink the shaft another 25 feet and to perform other development work on the surface to determine the width of the hole, which is proving of greater width than formerly estimated. The Portland owners of the Bear's Nest property have become aware of the fact that the big tunnel was run over the ledge, where it had sagged in following the formation of a surface depression, and that a great mistake was made in working on the second and back ledge, about 1600 feet up the hill side. The croppings of the main ledge have been uncovered on each side of the tunnel for a distance of 240 feet, and the American stockholders, knowing this fact, refused last winter to dispose of the mine at a high figure, saying the property was not for sale. When a settlement has been made with the Hamburg bondholders, who are the German stockholders of the mine, or when their stock has been secured, we look to see the Bear's Nest property opened out and developed on the extension of the Treadwell ledge, and farther rainbow chasing into the hillside for a barren ledge beyond and above the Treadwell extension to cease.

The $4000 mortgage held against the Bennett mine has been satisfactorily lifted to all parties concerned, and the mining operations are going ahead lively.

The Bennett mine, while owned by Messrs. Runkle, Lutes & Hommedieu, is coming to the front as an ore producer. Gus Olsen, the foreman, has uncovered a four-foot ledge north of the blacksmith shop, which carries free gold and high grade sulphurets. There is no better showing to-day to be found in the basin. One hundred tons have been taken out ready to be sent to the mill. Above this ledge several hundred feet is another ledge, just below Campbell's mill, which measures five feet across, and from which large chunks of ore sulphurets have been blasted out. They have piled up here over 300 tons of ore. The men were engaged in building an ore chute, connecting the two lines of track running from the ore bin at the head of the Nowell tunnel, to the lower ledge. The upper ledge will be connected through with a double track, so as to run empty and loaded cars to the lower trackway. They have leased the Nowell mill for the season, and have the battery of 20 stamps and eight Frue vanners in readiness to run. The engine will pull the loaded cars on the tunnel track to the mill from the ore bin in the basin.

The Ontario Cricket Association has decided that this year's annual match between the Philadelphia and Ontario teams will be played in Toronto July 27 and 28. The Philadelphians' dates are: July 23 and 24 with Rosedale; 25 and 26 with Toronto; 27 and 28 with the Ontario eleven, 30 and 31 with Hamilton. On the next four days they will play two matches with London and Toronto players.

WRESTLING.

WAITING FOR A MATCH.

Dan McLeod, the sturdy Scot, is at Milbrae rusticating, preparatory to another match, says the San Francisco Chronicle. His recent successes have emboldened his backers, who are now negotiating for a match with either "Farmer" Burns, Wimmer or Evan Lewis. Wimmer will probably be given the first chance, as McLeod is anxious to defeat every prominent wrestler in the country before tackling such a formidable opponent as Evan Lewis, the acknowledged champion of America. McLeod is a formidable man of his weight, and his admirers in this city think that he can give Lewis the greatest match of his life, notwithstanding the fact that he would have to give away so much in weight.

Priestley's Dress Fabrics

In the long run it is the quality of the material that will determine the success of a lady's costume. Every lady who has at all studied the matter knows this. Priestley's Black Dress Goods are the best that the market affords. That is conceded on all hands. The ladies of Great Britain cordially acknowledge it. The American ladies prefer Priestley's dress fabrics to French. Our Canadian ladies are now asking for them. They wear better than other goods; but their great charm consists in a peculiar richness and softness of appearance, and a flexibility which enables them to drape in the costume with that suggestion of flow and rhythm which it is the dream of all tasteful women to realise. 6

Short Talk on Advertising.

An advertisement won't work miracles, it won't sell ice in Greenland, nor snow shoes at the equator. It will sell overcoats in July if they are cheap enough, but a seasonable ad. of seasonable stuff is always best.

Dull season advertising must be considered in two ways. As advertising and as insurance—insurance of business—insurance against loss of trade.

Such insurance should be placed on the same business principles that dictate the placing of fire and life insurance. Pick out the strongest companies—the best papers.

Business insurance—advertising—is better than any other kinds. They repay the losses caused by misfortune. Advertising prevents the misfortune.

It may be possible to do advertising from which you will never see any results. It is certain that you will never get results from the advertising that you do not do.

If all the money that is wasted in worthless media were concentrated in the best paper—a paper like "The Times," it would carry a GOOD advertisement straight through the dull season.

Advertising finds a parallel in farming. At some seasons the harvest follows the planting very quickly, at others the result is slower.

Plant advertising seed in December and the crop comes at once. Plant in July and it may be September before the full, rich harvest comes, but it will come. And if you plant a little "gardensass" along with it, you'll get something to eat right straight through July and August too.

Don't try to sell heavy things—things involving great outlay. Seek out the little catchy useful things. Get a wedge of satisfaction started into the house with a three-cent fan, and the big end of it will carry in some silk dresses later on.

Running expenses are much the same whether you're dull or busy. Figure the cost of advertising against the gross profit of the increased business from week to week and the operation will show a profit every time.
